THE PEACE OFFERED THE SOUTH.

The peace offer made by the representatives of the government of the Confederate States to Washington has been received by the President. The offer is intended to end the contest of arms between the United States and the Confederate States of America. The terms of the offer are as follows: The United States will recognize the Confederate States of America as a nation, and will establish diplomatic relations with them. The Confederate States will recognize the United States as a nation, and will establish diplomatic relations with them. The United States will pay to the Confederate States the sum of $2,000,000,000, in gold. The Confederate States will pay to the United States the sum of $2,000,000,000, in gold. The Confederate States will agree to the restoration of all property taken from them by the United States, and the United States will agree to the restoration of all property taken from them by the Confederate States. The Confederate States will agree to the payment of all claims made by the United States against them, and the United States will agree to the payment of all claims made by them against the United States. The Confederate States will agree to the payment of all claims made by the United States against them, and the United States will agree to the payment of all claims made by them against the United States.

THE NEW CURRENCY BILL.

The Senate have passed the New Currency Bill, and it has been referred to a committee of the whole house to be reported upon. The bill provides for the issue of a new currency, to be known as the "Confederate Currency," and to be printed on cloth. The bill also provides for the redemption of the existing currency, and for the payment of all debts owed by the government. The bill further provides for the establishment of a banking system, and for the appointment of a board of directors to manage the affairs of the bank. The bill also provides for the establishment of a postal system, and for the appointment of a postmaster general to manage the affairs of the post office.

THE MOUNTAIN SIGNAL.

Dalton, Ga., Saturday, Jan. 9, 1864.

Changing more of the same.

The signal is given to the friends of the Union, that the situation of affairs here is more critical than ever. The enemy are in force and are in position to attack us at any moment. The people are divided in their opinions, and the government is in trouble. The situation is so critical that it is necessary for the people to unite in support of the government. The signal is given that the people should unite in support of the government.

This page contains a newspaper article from The Mountain Signal, Vol. XVI, Dahlgonea, Ga., Saturday, February 2, 1866. The article discusses various topics including news from Georgia, politics, and society. The text is printed in a readable serif font, typical of 19th-century newspapers. The page is well-organized with clear paragraphs and headings, although some paragraphs are indented or formatted differently to highlight important points or sections. The overall layout is consistent with the style of a late 19th-century newspaper.
