Student Pressure Saves HOPE Cuts
Barnes Backs Down on Plan to Reduce Fees

By Kerrie Mathews
Staff Writer

The president of the Student Government Association at Gainesville College said student petitions and a planned rally played an important role in forcing Gov. Roy Barnes to abandon plans to reduce HOPE payments for mandatory fees.

Cody Guined, SGA president at GC, said petitions that circulated on the GC campus and other Georgia National Black History Month events played a part in forcing Barnes to change his mind.

Guined said a rally planned for Feb. 9 on the GC campus also contributed to the decision. The GC SGA had contacted student representatives from all 34 institutions in the University of Georgia system and invited them to attend the rally.

According to Guined, college students "understand what will, and will not affect us, and take it very personally when we feel something is going to impose on us."

He added, "If another issue of this magnitude comes up, we're going to do the same thing."

Diversity Month Features Gospel

By Jay Way
Staff Writer

An African-American gospel chorus, a group discussion and other activities will highlight the celebration of Cultural Diversity Month and Black History Month at Gainesville College.

On Feb. 18 at noon, The African American Gospel Chorus from The University of Alabama will perform in the auditorium of the Continuing Education/Performing Arts building. The chorus is a 45-person group that includes Gainesville native Corey Butts, a graduate of Gainesville High School.

On Feb. 28 at noon, a group discussion will be held in the Lanier ABC room of the Student Activities building, where soul food will be served. The discussion will be led by Dexter M. Wimblish, legal counsel for the New town Florist Club and Greg Beutista, Assistant Director of El Puente in Gainesville.

All month during February, the GC library will display a collection of books written by black authors, plus books written about blacks and other minorities. In the Student Center, there will be a showcase of Beulah Rucker Museum artifacts.

Cyber Cafe Puts Computers in Student Center

Facility Designed for Registration, Checking E-mail
By Jessica Malcom
Staff Writer

A new addition to the Student Center is the Cyber Cafe, which opened in early January. The Cyber Cafe, which currently houses six computers, was created so that students could conveniently check their e-mail, register for classes, or do other work on the Gainesville College homepage.

Officials say, however, that the facility is not designed for students to write papers or browse the Internet.

Located by the Financial Aid office, the Cyber Cafe provides a warm atmosphere where students can have access to computers without taking up space or disturbing others in the ACTT Center.

Director of Student Activities Michelle S. Brown and Byron Drew, director of the library and the ACTT Center, formed a committee with several others to plan and design the Cyber Cafe, as well as the other renovations in the Student Center. "It was just an idea I'd had," Brown said. "I've always wanted to have computers in the Student Center."

Brown added that, since coffee-houses are a popular hangout these days, gourmet coffee will soon be available in the cafe.

College to Hire 'Eminent Scholar'

By Jeannie McElroy
Staff Writer

Gainesville College has been designated as the first two-year college in the University System of Georgia to offer an Eminent Scholar faculty chair in history. A national search is being conducted to fill this prestigious position for Fall Semester 2000.

The Eminent Scholar of History will teach at the college, as well as conduct historical research; serve as a resource person for development and implementation of educational programs for the entire community; and function as college liaison to the community and other educational institutions.

The Eminent Scholar will have demonstrated superior teaching ability and have extraordinary expertise in his or her field of study, either through research or experience.

The benefits to Gainesville College and the community should be significant. An Eminent Scholar brings an additional level of expertise, playing a special role in public service to our local community while enhancing the academic reputation of Gainesville College. This should enable the College to maintain its "edge of excellence" by attracting top students.

In addition, the community will be enriched by the history research focused primarily on regional history and culture. The history scholar will work with a new history museum to be located on the Brenau University campus as well.

The Gainesville College Foundation has raised $500,000 through private contributions, which were matched by the Georgia Eminent Scholars Endowment Trust Fund set up by the Georgia General Assembly in 1986.

A minimum sum of $1 million is required for the implementation of this program. The money will be used to supplement the scholar's salary, research, technology, and travel expenses.

After-school Program Focuses on Technology
By Jennifer Ponders
Staff Writer

In a time where there is so much negative talk about children, it is important to bring out the best in them. J.B. Sharma, a Gainesville College physics teacher, and Jan Hughes, a fifth-grade gifted teacher at Sardis Elementary, created Physical Science Outreach for Gifted Children, which is now in its fourth year. Among its many supporters are teachers, students, and even parents.

The Physical Science Outreach allows fourth- and fifth-graders from Sardis and Oakwood Elementary Schools to visit the GC campus on designated afternoons. Sharma then teaches them interesting topics and allows them to be creative as they interact with the computers. Currently, the program offers instruction to approximately 30 students.

Hughes believes that this after-school program is very important. She said, "Many students are not getting enough math and science.

College Founder's Wife Dies at 77
By Nicky Willis
Staff Writer

Mrs. Margaret Boston Cromartie, the widow of Gainesville College founder John Cromartie, died on January 16. She was 77.

A native of Texas, Cromartie lived in Gainesville for 40 years. She was a homemaker and was also very active in many community and civic organizations. Among the organizations she was involved in were Junior League, the First United Methodist Church and the Twentieth Century Study Club.

She devoted most of her time to Access Hall County, Eagle Ranch and Gainesville College. She also had a love for the arts. She served on the Gainesville Arts Council Board, and in 1995 she was awarded the Friends of the Arts Award. Cromartie, along with her husband, funded the Cromartie-Hubb-Boston Scholarship. The scholarship is awarded annually to a GC choral/vocal major.

Anyone wishing to make a memorial donation is asked to make donations to the First United Methodist Church Chapel Building Fund or Eagle Ranch.

Don't Stop Now.

The large ice storm that caused widespread damage across North Georgia the weekend of Jan. 22-23 was responsible for the decision to close Gainesville College on Mon., Jan. 24.

On Sunday, Jan. 23, at 5 p.m. GC President Martha Nesbitt, after checking the weather conditions and noting that local schools had cancelled Monday classes, spoke with GC security officials and made the decision to close the school. The distance many GC students must commute to and from the school was the principal consideration in closing.

Evening classes had been planned to continue as scheduled, until an ice-laden branch fell and damaged a power line, causing a two-hour power loss, at which point night classes were cancelled as well.

Bowers Addresses Political Club

By Ken Abbott
Staff Writer

Former state Attorney General Michael Bowers gave a speech to and answered questions from members of the Democrats and Republicans Club on Jan. 19. Bowers spoke on a variety of subjects, ranging from affirmative action, to the Confederate Flag, to the difficulties of politics in general, and also a small part of his personal history.

Bowers' speech began with a dissertation on politics in general, and how he, with his background, had managed to succeed in the field. "This is truly the land of opportunity," he said. "The opportunities in this country are absolutely unbelievable...there is no limit in what you can do."

Georgia in particular, said Bowers, is different politically from other states because of its "one-party government." Georgia has never had a Republican governor. Despite this, and despite the fact that Bowers himself is Republican, he said of the Democrats: "They're pretty decent people; they care," later adding, "for the most part, Georgia is fairly well-governed."

Bowers adds that increasing population in the suburbs will bring a larger conservative influence into Georgia politics. This is going to cause changes in several areas. "Most governors in the next 20 years are going to be Republicans," he said, "And most of them are going to be from North Georgia."
Gainesville Theatre Alliance to Stage ‘Crucible’ Feb. 22-27

By Summer LaPann
Staff Writer

On February 22-27 the Gainesville Theatre Alliance will turn Bearnau University’s Pearce Auditorium into Salem, Mass., for the production of Arthur Miller’s “The Crucible.” Set in 1692, the play deals with witchcraft and who shall die for practicing such a sinister crime. “The Crucible” highlights the dramatic interaction between a number of honest and determined characters, and a range of unethical and bewildered characters as well.

“The Crucible” represents a special performance for GTA, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary this season. The group performed “The Crucible” as part of its first season, in 1979-80. Directed by Lisa Adler, Artistic Director of Atlanta’s Horizon Theatre, the play will be performed with the help of 18 actors from both Gainesville College and Bearnau University.

According to Jim Hammond, GTA Artistic Director, “One of the most remarkable plays of the twentieth century, ‘The Crucible’ is an explosive drama about the Salem witch trials of 1692, when children’s lies led to 19 executions. This gripping historical play is also a timely parable of our contemporary society where reputations and lives can be destroyed by a mere rumor.”

Hammond stated in GTA’s first performance of “The Crucible” as Governor Danforth. Hammond’s wife, Gay Hammond, was also in the first production, playing the part of Abigail Williams.

Gainesville College students can see the play at no charge on February 23 and 24, with all other nights priced at $3 per ticket. Show times for “The Crucible” are at 7:30 every night, with the exception of the Feb. 27 performance, at 2:30 p.m. Every- one is invited to experience the mayhem caused in this small town, along with the challenge of figuring out who is guilty or innocent.

Mini Movie Reviews

GIRL INTERRUPTED

‘Girl Interrupted’ is a drama based on the autobiography of Susanna Kaysen, who, in her late teens, was confined to a mental institution for attempting to kill herself by chasing a bottle of aspirin with a bottle of vodka. Winona Ryder stars as Susanna. Befriended by Lisa (Angelina Jolie), a manipulative sociopath, Susanna revolts against the hospital’s diagnosis of her illness. After seeing death first-hand, though, Susanna turns from rebellious to cooperative in order to live and get the help she needs to survive. This film makes you appreciate your mental stability.

THE GREEN MILE

Set in a 1930’s Southern prison, Paul Edgecomb (Tom Hanks) is a cellblock guard on death row who develops a friendship with John Coffey (Michael Clarke Duncan), an inmate on the “green mile.” Coffey has a miraculous secret and finds a friend in Warden Edgecomb. Hanks and Duncan use a vast array of emotions to portray the sadness and finiality of death with the love and respect of friendship in one of the best films of the year. From beginning to end, “The Green Mile” takes you through a journey of emotions you never knew could be so strong. Bring some Kleenex; you’ll need it.

Figueroa’s El Maguey a Mexican Feast

By Michelle Rice
Special to The Compass

El Maguey is one of many Mexican restaurants in Gainesville, and it is my favorite.

Owner Alfredo Figueroa started working there as a waiter, and he has moved from manager to part-owner to sole proprietor in eight years. He has tripled the size of the restaurant.

The food is consistently excellent, the service is impeccable, and it is a must try on my restaurant list.

The menu is extensive and offers a wide variety to satisfy anyone’s appetite, including a kid’s menu, vegetarian dishes, 30 different combinations, 22 Especialidades de La Casa (house specialties), and daily specials.

My dinner companions and I started out with some appetizers and the bottomless basket of chips and salsa. (I always ask for the hotter version). The Southwestern Chowder is very much like a Manhattan clam chowder, but with shrimp instead of clams. It had roasted corn, grilled shrimp, and calabacitas (zucchini). We also had a daily special, Caldo de Pollo, as an appetizer. This is a truly authentic Mexican soup, with chicken, peppers, cilantro, onions, and rice, with a little spicy kick. Yummy! Appetizers average about $5.

My party had the toughest time deciding what to have out of the 61 various combinations and specialties. Our waiter was helpful and pointed out some of the most popular dishes: #28, #51 and #35. (You’ll have to come to find out what they are.)

Jack had the vegetarian dish of Enchiladas Rancheras. It was three specialty prepared cheese enchiladas topped with cheese and onions, melted cheese, lettuce, tomatoes and sour cream.

Tom decided on one of the house specialties – Chiles Rellenos. These are mild, green chili peppers stuffed with ground beef and Monterey jack cheese. They are then dipped in an egg batter and quickly deep-fried to perfection. The dish comes with two chile rellenos and a guacamole salad.

I am a fajita fanatic and had another especialidades de la casa – Texas Fajitas. These are a combination of beef, chicken and shrimp sauteed with onions, tomatoes and bell peppers. They are served on an iron skillet that arrives smoking hot and sizzling. The accompaniments are fried beans with cheese, guacamole salad, sour cream and a choice of corn or flour tortillas.

The guacamole and salsa re the freshest I’ve seen and made from scratch. Figueroa boasts that “There is nothing frozen and nothing out of a can – everything is homemade.” Combinations average $6.25, and house specialties average $8.25. Good food at a good price!

The Compass

Go Slow on Expansion

Think about the reasons why you chose to come to GC. If you are like most, this college was appealing because of size. You enjoyed the thought of smaller classes, and easier access to faculty, staff and technology. Is it possible for GC to lose its personal touch as the student body grows? The most probable answer to this question is yes. Indeed, it would be surprising if that didn't happen.

While there are positive sides to a growing school, there are also several important disadvantages that concern students. One such problem is the classroom space. It often feels as if your neighbor is sitting in the same desk as you in some classrooms. Classes are being over-loaded to fulfill demand, and desks are being filled. In one particular classroom it seems as though some desks were added since last semester. Most people learn more efficiently in a comfortable environment. Therefore, adding students to an already full room will not accomplish a better learning environment.

Students come to GC because of a personal one-on-one relationship with professors. As the student body grows, strain will be placed on this very important relationship. Students will find themselves waiting longer for assistance. They may also find the amount of time for assistance limited.

Another complaint made by students is parking availability. Obviously, we will need more parking spots since GC is growing. Students should not have to spend 15 minutes looking for a spot in the morning. It is a common occurrence for students to circle several lots looking for a spot. In their minds they are hoping that someone will leave a building and head for their car.

Should GC start being stricter in its admission standards? Based on the most prominent concerns, the answer is yes. This area is growing, and very rapidly at that, and therefore GC is a hot item on the market. People are considering this institution because of size, access to resources and facilities, and convenience to home and work. These are the same reasons why we chose to come here. Yet, the very benefits that make GC so appealing are at risk if we attempt to raise the number of students enrolling. Our small enrollment is what makes GC great, and too much of an increase in the number of students here will destroy the reason they came.

Practice Your ‘Bill of Assertive Rights’

Okay! So I’m a lawyer—the profession people love to hate! But if you know me, you know teaching is my first love, and it must agree with me since I have been teaching communication since 1982. Because of this union of law and communication, I am tuned into people’s rights as well as their communication abilities.

Everyone has heard of Civil Rights and Constitutional Rights, but have you ever thought of Communication Rights? Much like the Bill of Rights to our U.S. Constitution, let me introduce you to Manuel J. Smith’s “Bill of Assertive Rights” which may serve as a framework for modern communication apparatus and practice.

A Bill of Assertive Rights
1. You have the right to judge your own behavior, thoughts, and emotions, and to take responsibility for their initiation and consequences upon yourself. (This is your prime assertive right. The other nine rights listed here are derived from this one and serve to elaborate on it more fully.)
2. You have the right to offer no reasons or excuses for justifying your behavior.
3. You have the right to judge if you are responsible for finding solutions to other people’s problems.
4. You have the right to change your life!

accomplished your desired objective and serve to elaborate on it more fully.)
5. You have the right to make mistakes—and be responsible for them.
6. You have the right to say, “I don’t know.”
7. You have the right to be independent of the goodwill of others before coping with them.
8. You have the right to be illogical in making decisions.
9. You have the right to say, “I don’t understand.”
10. You have the right to say, “I don’t care.”

Accompanying these Assertive Rights is a corresponding set of rights I would like to introduce to you. Although author Norma Carr-Ruffino titles this list, “Everywoman’s Bill of Rights,” I think the principles of these rights apply across a broad spectrum of humanity. What do you think? Everywoman’s Bill of Rights
1. The right to be treated with respect.
2. The right to have and express your own feelings and opinions.
3. The right to be listened to and taken seriously.
4. The right to set your own priorities.
5. The right to ask for what you want.
6. The right to get what you pay for.
7. The right to ask for information from professionals (doctors, lawyers, counselors).
8. The right to choose not to assert yourself.

Are you aware of the Communication Rights you practice? Are they fair to you as well as being fair to others? Ask yourself, do others in your life violate your rights? Significant others? What can be done about it? You don’t need a lawyer to assert your communication Rights. . . you just need to be aware of these rights and to adopt them as your personal rights and principles. Then practice them. Communicate always with these rights in mind.

I firmly believe these rights can change your life for the better—and the best part of that empowering transformation is you didn’t need a lawyer to speak for you or tell you what to do (and then take your money)! YOU did it!

GC Should Offer On-Campus Day Care

By Tracy Wade
Special to The Compass

Gainesville College is a community college whose purpose is to educate all members of our community. The college is helping thousands of people get a higher education. Our college, however, is failing to help those who need it the most, the family. Gainesville College should help families by offering on-campus day care. The benefits to the school, the family and the current non-traditional student are limitless.

I believe enrollment from non-traditional students would increase greatly if GC offered day care on campus. Non-traditional students, those who have been out of school for five years, make up about 33 percent of the student body. I suspect that for many non-traditional students, a break so long could be due to children. As a mother of three toddlers, I have learned the hard way the value of an education. I want to provide a comfortable life for my kids by working in a rewarding and lucrative career. I want to be able to save for their college education. Most importantly, my goal is to be an educated woman in the twenty-first century. How could I possibly go back to school? What would I do with the kids all day?

On-campus child care would benefit the school and the students. Without on-campus day care, parents who attend Gainesville College most likely pay some form of child care at an inconvenient location. These parents would pay the same amount for a more convenient location and easier access to their children, thus increasing enrollment of the student parents. The school would benefit by providing a more hands-on working experience to early childhood education majors.

Strengthening of busy families is another reward of on-campus day care. Parents could also work in the early childhood education majors. The schools would still have to subsidize the budget; however, if the demand was there, Gainesville College would seriously consider it.

As Pat said, “All we need are the numbers.” As a mother, I encourage you to express the importance of on-campus day care to the dean.
Century's Great Sports Moments

I'd like to reminisce on the great sports moments of the 20th century. Sit back and think about your most memorable sports moment as you read along. Did any of them include names such as Michael Jordan, Hank Aaron, Joe Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Mark McGwire, Babe Ruth, Larry Bird, Roger Maris, Mickey Mantle, Wilt Chamberlain, Joe Montana or Jerry Rice?

How about the Atlanta Braves, New York Yankees, Brooklyn Dodgers, Dallas Cowboys, Boston Celtics or the Chicago Bulls. Do any of those teams ring a bell?

Let's even mention the local legendary programs of the East Hall Vikings, Gainesville Red Elephants and any other legendary high school program around Georgia.

Most of you are asking, what about Georgia or Georgia Tech? True, there have been many wonderful moments in both historic programs, many of which came against each other, with the most recent moment on Nov. 27, 1999. Tech eventually beat the Dawgs in overtime off a controversial call.

I'd like to share my most memorable sports moment with you. It was game seven of the 1992 National League Championship Series. The game pitted the Atlanta Braves against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

I can still see the limping Sid Bream churning his huge legs andailing knees around the bases at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium to score the winning run. Wow! What a moment that was!

Now, I'd like to take time to talk to the faculty members of Gainesville College and see what they remember.

"I've got to name two," said Dan Cabaniss, Assistant Professor of English. "The first was in 1972, when Joe Frazier knocked Muhammad Ali down for the first time in Ali's career in the 15th round of their heavyweight championship fight.

"The second was the 1975 World Series, when Carlton Fisk hit his game-winning home run in the sixth game and the (Boston) Red Sox beat the (Cincinnati) Reds. I was a student in Boston at the time and had the good fortune to have a standing-room-only ticket for the game."

Sallie Duhling, Head of the Humanities Division, said she also had two. "It was Herschel Walker's first year at the University of Georgia, the Dawgs were behind Tennessee 14-0 at the half, and Walker ran all over a Tennessee linebacker to score the game-winning touchdown. That was the first exciting thing I saw from Walker," said Duhling.

She also cited Sid Bream scoring the winning run to win the 1992 National League Championship and send the Braves to the World Series.

Intramural Programs Under Way

By Jon Krueger
Staff Writer

With the second semester well underway, Coach Jimmy Kirkland now turns his attention to intramural sports. Kirkland hopes to offer interested students a wide variety of activities to participate in this spring, including badminton, tennis, volleyball, bowling, fishing, and basketball.

Kirkland is focusing early on starting basketball. "Right now we're trying to get basketball off the ground," Kirkland stated. According to Kirkland, "basketball will start as soon as we get the first two rosters in."

Kirkland's schedule for the other sports is as follows: badminton and bowling will begin in late February. Tennis, golf, and fishing will begin later in the semester.

Volleyball, which includes two men's and two women's teams, will start in either late February or early March.

Basketball and volleyball will begin at noon, and all other activities will be held later in the day.

Kirkland wants interested students to know that "the best way to find out about intramurals is to look on the bulletin boards in the gym and the Student Center."

Taking Aim

Ryan Holland lines up a shot during a recent game of pool in the Student Center Game Room. There will be a Nine Ball Tournament Feb. 8 at 11 a.m. in the Student Center Game Room. The 'Big Final 8-Ball Tournament' will be held on April 25 at 11 a.m., also in the Student Center Game Room.

SORBA Sponsors Trips For Kids

The Southern Off-Road Bicycle Association (SORBA), headquartered at Gainesville College, has become one of the first national organizations to sponsor Trips for Kids.

Trips for Kids is an association that helps disadvantaged children experience the outdoors on bicycles. It was founded by Marilyn Price in Marian, Ca.

GT, Trek, Biketown USA, and Woody's Mountain Bikes of Helen have all donated to the cause. GT
