Gainesville Junior College
Gainesville, Georgia

Points Of View . . .
A dedicated administration
A cosmopolitan sophomore
An ambitious freshman
The Administration has sincere aspirations for the college in 1967-68 . . .

aspirations that we will fulfill our obligations to our students

aspirations that we will deserve accreditation aspirations that we will have thoroughly earned the respect of our student body.

Gainesville Junior College
Gainesville, Georgia
1967–1968

Editor—Janey Dean
Assistant Editor—Dell Deaton
Adviser—Jack Jones
There are diversified activities oriented toward the individual interests of each student.
The student center offers a relaxed atmosphere for students during their leisure time. This center also houses the college bookstore and cafeteria.

A studious atmosphere prevails in the spacious library. Professional help is available in assisting each student in his specialized research. Other facilities easily accessible to the student are study carrels, an up-to-date browsing section, and adjoining conference rooms.
The freshman enters a world of freedom, of opportunity, and of responsibility to display his unleashed potential; however, in this world he must resolve his frustrations and confront his anticipations to survive the pressures of our time.
Dignitaries, eminent educators, and other interested parties participate in the dedication ceremonies of Gainesville Junior College on October 18, 1967. This culminates many months of unceasing efforts by the administration and the faculty.

And Gainesville Junior College is dedicated
To its students and posterity
To the view of academic life
To the view of social life
To the view of spiritual life.
Former governor Carl E. Sanders receives standing ovation.
Having passed that frustrating initial year, a sophomore grasps more firmly what is expected of him in his present role and prepares himself for the demands of the future. Although the sophomore is a little more secure, a little more established, and a little more arrogant, still he must strive toward overcoming the existing perplexities.
Dances and concerts frequent the college campus. Well-known groups as the Tams or the The Dynamic Showmen highlight events during the year. Local bands provide more planned activities for the social calendar.
The college offers outstanding gymnasium facilities. The most recently constructed building on campus, it houses a collegiate-sized gym, a smaller gym, and an Olympic-size pool. Under superior athletic supervision, each student receives excellent instruction in becoming proficient in many sports.
The aerial shot only presents the physical plant...
The administration makes it an academic plant...
The sophomore makes it an established plant...
The freshman represents a growing, populative plant.

With a deep sense of admiration and pride,
We, the 1968 Fathom staff, dedicate this annual

To one whose dedication to the ideals of education is undying.
To one who is a friend and counselor to each individual student.
To one who wholeheartedly gives of himself to his profession and his community.
To one who accepts the challenges, and yet the problems, of a young institution.
To one who inspires his students with the incentive to strive for success.
To one who patiently gives of his time and energy to student activities.
To one who can never be replaced in the hearts of the students, faculty, and administration of the college

To you...
Mr. Herbert Robinson
Dean of Students
MEN OF DIRECTION
A man whose devotion lies, in sundry fields...

A man devoted to...

his religion
his family
his college
his colleagues
his students.

Dr. Hugh Mills, Jr.
President
A man whose devotion lies in the academic well-being of the student.

A man devoted to . . .
the individual
the school spirit
the task at hand.

Joel H. Paul
Dean of Academic Affairs
A man whose devotion lies in the welfare and prosperity of the student.

A man devoted to . . .
  his principles
  his profession
  his zest for life.

Herbert W. Robinson
Dean of Students
A man whose devotion lies in the solidity of the financial resources of the school.

A man devoted to . . .
  responsibility
  integrity
  principle.

Albert B. Jones

MEN OF ACTIVITY
The Ancient Greeks believed in having a well developed, disciplined body as well as mind. Physical Education enables a person to strengthen his body, sharpen his reflexes, as well as to quicken his mind. G.J.C. is fortunate in having an Athletic Director and Staff as capable as Coaches Ball, Whiteside and Landers.

This structure houses one of the finest physical education departments in our state. The physical education building contains an olympic-size indoor, heated swimming pool; a multi-purpose gymnastics room with modern, up-to-date facilities in weight training, gymnastics, tumbling, and other related fields; and a basketball gymnasium with a seating capacity of 2000 spectators. To augment the physical education building, athletic fields and tennis courts have been constructed.

EPILOGUE

Gainesville Junior College is a young school, cradled in stability, yet possessing a progressive spirit. Although a newly established institution, the college has surpassed first expectations. Application for accreditation has been met; the faculty and administration are of superior quality. Gainesville Junior College increased its enrollment 79.2% over its first year, surpassing all her sister colleges in total percentage of increase. Enrollment continues to soar.

Education is of vital concern to a secure future for our nation. This security depends upon more young people taking the initiative to enrich their own knowledge and to pursue their interests with action. GJC, as a growing community institution, recognizes the needs of society. Therefore, each student is made aware of how he fits into our complex society and what he can do to improve his world and his future.

Although as a young college there have been many rewarding accomplishments, each student has experienced many more personal involvements which time cannot erase. For many it is the first year at the college, and we have become a part of GJC. The smallness here offers a warm relationship among students and administration and offers security from namelessness. For others of us it is our second year; we have witnessed the school’s creation and its advancement. We have experienced its friendship and the close association acquired in personal acquaintances. However, the school is not so young or so small that misfortune cannot find its way to our door. This student body has lost eight fine students since its beginning. Those who knew and loved these students cannot forget the influence of each one. Although each is a loss to his family and friends, we must gain strength and pursue life in a manner which will do credit to those which we have lost.

GJC will continue to progress academically, to remove any obstacles, to meet any problems squarely as it has in the past, making a tradition of striving ahead. We are a united student body, administration, and faculty, and through this unity we shall become stronger. To face the frightening possibilities of our modern future requires great courage and intelligence. Therefore, Gainesville Junior College is providing each student the greatest lesson he can learn—to face the future with knowledge and confidence.
