25th ANNUAL MEETING OF GC FOUNDATION

"I wish to thank all of you for your generous response to the needs of Gainesville College students," said Alumnus Fred Kelly, Chairman of the Gainesville College Foundation, as he spoke to more than 300 supporters of the College at the Foundation's 25th Annual Meeting held on Sunday (January 26) at the College.

Kelly congratulated 1991 Fund Drive Chairman Joe Chipman and Honorary Fund Drive Chairman Ralph Cleveland for an outstanding effort in exceeding the 1991 Fund Drive goal of $215,000 in such a tight financial year.

A highlight of the meeting was the designation of J.M. (Ray) McRae, Gainesville, Chairman of the Board of First National Bancorp, as an Honorary Life Trustee of the Foundation. McRae, named a charter member of the Board of Trustees in 1967, provided yeoman service to the Foundation and the College,

Alumni — Take A Bow!!
Pat Yourselves On The Back

Successful phonathons, coordinated by GC alumni, were conducted on 12 nights in the fall. Alumni invaded banks, car dealerships, and schools to take advantage of the multiple phones available. Locations included the counties of Barrow, Banks, Hall, Forsyth, Jackson, Habersham, Clarke, and Gwinnett.

Besides the fun and enjoyment of renewing acquaintances in many instances, the 170 volunteers:
- Attempted 4,852 calls, of which 1,887 were completed.
- Received pledges from 426 alumni.
- Raised $11,170 for the Annual Fund Drive.

Thanks to all of you who contributed time, money, and facilities. These phonathons show that GC alumni appreciate the opportunities they received from the College and that they want others to have the same opportunities.

Photographs of some of the participants in the phonathons are featured on Pages 5 and 13.
CHANCELLOR VISITS GC CAMPUS

Dr. H. Dean Propst, Chancellor of the University System of Georgia, was honored at a reception on November 26 in the lobby of the Continuing Education/Performing Arts Center. More than 100 faculty, staff, and students of the College attended and had an opportunity to talk with the Chancellor on an informal basis.

A nine-foot Christmas tree had been mounted in the lobby that morning, and each faculty and staff had been asked to bring an ornament to the reception and to hang it on the tree.

Following the reception, the Chancellor met with members of the Administrative Council for an information-sharing session. He indicated that he always gets excited when he talks with students. He reminded the Council that he had direct contact with students in his academic role at Armstrong State College immediately before becoming Vice Chancellor for the University System. He was named Chancellor in 1985.

Accompanying the Chancellor was Mr. Tom Daniel, Vice Chancellor for External Affairs for the System. Also, four GC Foundation Trustees were present — Fred Kelly, Chairman; Joe Chipman, Vice Chairman; Joel Ames; and Ben Easterling.

Governor's Georgia Rebound Program Should Be Supported

By J. Foster Watkins, President
Gainesville College

About this time last year when Governor Miller assumed his responsibilities as chief executive officer of our state, he noted that as a state we would have to come to grips with the reality of the slowdown in the American economy which has affected our nation and our state. Through his personal leadership, and with broad legislative support in a special session of the Georgia Legislature, a $415 million cut from the state operating budget was formulated. Nearly all of us are aware of some agency of state government and perhaps even individuals who have been touched by this reduction in state funding.

Despite his desire to protect education and his obvious commitment to the educational process, Governor Miller had to include elementary and secondary education and higher education in the budget-cutting process. Elementary and secondary education budgets were protected to a degree with a cut of only 2.5 percent, but the Board of Regents' allocation suffered a cut of 8.2 percent, second only to the Department of Corrections from a percentage perspective.

The impact of such a cut was felt significantly in the University System of Georgia and most directly by your first alma mater — Gainesville College. With the initial cut and the anticipated one which has been planned for in the mid-term adjustment process in early 1992, the allocation to the College would be reduced almost $700,000, a cumulative 10.5 percent.

The Governor has indicated that he will make every effort to protect education from further cuts during the legislative session which convened in January, but his ability to do that is heavily contingent upon the performance of the economy in the early months of the year.

The bulk of the cuts at Gainesville College was absorbed by not filling ten earned faculty, staff, and administrative positions and by making large cuts in operating expenditures. Every effort was made to maintain the direct delivery of instruction, but the out-of-class environment and the vital support from staff have been weakened. In light of those reductions, the Gainesville College Foundation has attempted to respond to requests which have come to it for aid during the year. The Foundation did provide significant support to assist the Library/Learning Resource Center in light of its reduction, and provided the major source of funding for faculty/staff development and professional participation activities. Additionally, the demands for student financial assistance through the Foundation were intensified as the previously rather heavy reliance on state-supported student work aid was restricted severely in the budget also.

I attended the Toccoa stop on the pre-legislative tour and heard Governor Miller begin to describe his vision for a future Georgia. He indicated to me that he would be saying some things that he thought higher education people would welcome in subsequent stops on the tour. Later that same day at an Athens stop and in a precedent-setting afternoon visit with the Board of Regents, Governor Miller made a bold statement about the needs of higher education and his commitments toward meeting those needs. In subsequent weeks, the Governor has titled his 1992 legislative package "Georgia Rebound" and is advancing it as a way for Georgia to set the pace for the Southeast in the last decade of the 20th Century. His comprehensive package gives careful attention to the needs of the state including needs in Economic Development, Education, Environment, and Public Safety.

In Georgia Rebound, he proposed a $140 million bond program for capital improvements at System institutions. Such an infusion in capital funding would make it possible to support the first 15 projects on the capital “wish list” of the Board of Regents which would include an academic building for Gainesville College, as we are currently 13th on that list. A 3 percent salary increase for faculty and staff is proposed, which the Governor hopes would at least stop the slide of Georgia in recent years when it slipped from first to fifth place in southeastern states with respect to salaries paid to college personnel. Also, state funds of $3.75 million are proposed to be divided among major public and private research institutions in the state.

Governor Miller closed his comments to the Board of Regents with a declaration that: “In the next three years, this (Georgia’s decline in higher education spending over the past two years) will not be the case with the Miller administration. I don’t care what it takes in budget cuts somewhere else, or revenue enhancements or a combination of both. We are going to put more into higher education.”

As institutional presidents, we have been encouraged by Chancellor H. Dean Propst to generate as much broad-based support as possible for the Governor’s Georgia Rebound initiatives. I would encourage each of you as alumni to let your local legislators know of your personal support of Governor Miller’s recommendations and encourage them to become a partner with the Governor in making a statement for the future by investing appropriately in higher education and in the other components of his package.

During the holidays, we spent some time working on a progress article which will appear widely in newspapers in Northeast Georgia. The title of that article, “Gainesville College — Moving Ahead Even in a Tight Budget Year,” reflects a continuing commitment on the part of the faculty and staff at Gainesville College to make the best use of your tax and tuition dollars in the interest of the students we serve. Please let us hear from you if you have thoughts about how we might make this a better institution.
Miller Seeks Higher Education Aid

Bob Campbell, Gainesville, retired editor of the Gainesville Times, very effectively addressed Governor Miller’s concerns regarding education in his column which appeared in the Times on December 4. With permission from the Times and Bob Campbell, this article has been included as a guest editorial. We would encourage careful consideration of it.

When I suggested in this space in mid-November that ex-college professor Zell Miller wasn’t likely to ignore the urgent needs of higher education, I had no idea the governor already had a plan. In fact, he outlined it in a speech the day before my column appeared.

He’s not going to let the current downturn in the state’s economy stall progress in Georgia’s colleges and universities. He knows we’ve been falling behind our neighboring states in funding higher education during the past decade. That slippage is bound to affect the quality of education in these schools.

The governor noted that:

• In 1991, only 12 percent of the state budget was appropriated for higher education, compared to over 15 percent in 1982, and
• Georgia dropped from first in average faculty salaries among southeastern states in 1982 to sixth for the 1990-91 school year.
• Only an average 1.3 percent of the total value of the University System’s physical facilities has been appropriated annually for new construction over the decade.
• Meanwhile, enrollment increased by 45 percent.

To help catch up with the needs, Miller proposed investing $140 million in construction, including an addition to the academic building at Gainesville College. He wants the program financed by a combination of a bond issue, private donations, corporate contributions and user fees.

His budget, he said, will provide a 3 percent pay increase for faculty and staff, comparable to the cost of living increase he’ll seek for other state employees. That’s not a lot, but it will help to make Georgia colleges competitive in the marketplace. After all, other states are suffering from the recession and won’t be handing out big raises. Georgia ought to return at least to the top quartile of colleges and universities in its salary scale over the next three years, as Miller suggests.

Does someone think the financial pinch in the colleges isn’t hurting?

I learned at a luncheon sponsored by the Northeast Georgia Medical Center last fall that hospitals and other health-care providers face a critical shortage of nurses and other professionals. That’s not startling news. But I was startled to learn that a big reason for the shortage is the lack of qualified faculty members at colleges and universities.

People who want to become nurses, physical therapists, speech therapists and the like are being turned away from school because of a lack of teachers.

Modest pay increases such as the governor proposes may not help much, but they are certainly a step in the right direction.

President Charles Knapp of the University of Georgia recently suggested significant tuition increases at the state-supported schools. I’m not sure that is a good idea, given the difficulty many folks have scraping up money to pay the present tuition.

Tuition and fees at the University of Georgia are already the sixth highest among 15 southeastern states. At two-year colleges, like Gainesville College, the tuition rate is currently the second highest in the region. Maybe we ought to slow the tuition rate spiral and let some of our neighbors catch up.

Zell Miller knows from personal experience how hard it is for many young people to pay for a college education, so I haven’t heard him joining the call for a big tuition increase. I’m not surprised, though, that he insists that the state meet urgent needs of its colleges and universities.

Fifteen years ago, Miller wrote of his teaching experience at Young Harris College: “There is no single thing that gives me greater pleasure than to spend an hour with 15 or 20 young persons in a classroom. The imparting of knowledge, the spark that sometimes is generated, the evidence of thirst for further information which sometimes is generated are a great ‘turn-on’ for me.”

I think he remembers what turned him on.

particularl y in its formative years. He also served a second term on the Board, beginning in 1971. First National Bank/Bancorp has been a significant financial supporter of the College over the years and has provided a wealth of leadership and volunteer personnel from its staff. McRae was also recognized for his significant role in the economic development of Gainesville-Hall County and Northeast Georgia and, more recently, for his leadership in the Chicopee Woods development.

Rich White, Gainesville, received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the Gainesville College Alumni Association. A 1970 graduate of the College, he served two terms on the Board of Trustees and served as Chairman in 1989. He was a member of the Endowment Steering Committee which worked diligently to raise the local funds to qualify for the $1.5 million from the federal government. Also, he served as the first chairman of the Investment Committee as it planned for the effective utilization of the College’s developing endowment. Besides his outstanding service on behalf of the College and Foundation, he has been the recipient of many honors in his community, including serving as President of the Gainesville-Hall County Chamber of Commerce, and being chosen Jaycees Young Man of the Year. Recently, he was appointed President of First National Bank of Gainesville.

The Regents Players, six talented local performers, collectively received the Distinguished Service Award, also from the Alumni Association. The Players, all from Gainesville, include Cathy Holderfield, Della Ruth Johnson, Dianne Martin, John Melvin, Jene Robocker, and Doug Stewart. An official fundraising group of the College, the Players have performed numerous times on behalf of the College including several shows in Atlanta honoring retiring members of the Board of Regents. Their most significant local performance was in the “From Cotton Fields to Learning Fields” kickoff of the 25th Anniversary Challenge Endowment Campaign in 1989.

These awards are presented annually to recognize alumni and friends of the College who have made significant contributions to the Association, the College, and the community.

The retiring Trustees were recognized: Sara Bannister, Patti Chambers, Tom Cole, Rob Jones, Fred Kelly, Barry Ladd, Ruth Lane, and Jo Stone, all of Gainesville; Johnny Burkett, Oakwood; Eddie Whitefield, Flowery Branch; Von Hughes, Buford; and Ken Shugart, Cumming.

Andy Walker, Immediate Past Chairman of the Foundation and 1991 Chairman of the Investment Committee, gave the first report of that Committee. He acknowledged receipt of the $1.5 million government check in May and announced that the endowment corpus now stands at nearly $3 million.

A “Twenty-Five Year Reflection,” highlighting events of the Foundation’s 25 years, was presented with the following individuals participating: Ralph Cleveland, Rosemary Dodd, Jimmy Faulkner, N.A. Jacobs, Fred Kelly, Pat McArthy, Herbert Robinson, Martha Simmons, and the Regents Players. The growth of the Foundation was illustrated by reference to the first Fund Drive goal of $10,000 and the 1991 goal of $215,000.

Gainesville College President J. Foster Watkins acknowledged the generous support to the Foundation and expressed continuing appreciation for funds received by the Foundation over the years. He encouraged careful consideration by those present of Governor Miller’s “Georgia Rebound” program, stressing its potential for aiding education in general and higher education in particular and Gainesville College’s role in the years ahead.

Entertainment during the luncheon preceding the meeting was provided by the Gainesville College Jazz Combo, directed by Roy Forrester.

Fred Kelly, local CPA and Chairman of the Gainesville College Foundation, spoke to Dr. Louise Holcomb’s accounting class on October 16 at the College. The Georgia Society of CPAs encouraged its members to talk to college accounting classes as part of its Career Day.

Forsyth Alumna Provides Special Help at Open Campus School

By Carroll Jones

At first glance Marguerite Mashburn Meagher (GC ’68) is gracious and energetic, and she emanates a certainty about who she is and what she does. Later, she is all these things still, but it is apparent that she also is a woman who is focused, committed, and extremely capable.

Marguerite Meagher has been a teacher for nearly 20 years. For the last three of those she has been able to demonstrate her unique teaching style in an equally unique school: she chairs the science and physical education departments at Gwinnett County’s Open Campus School, teaching health and physical education with a serious eye toward ethics and responsible living.

And yet, when she arrived at Gainesville College in the late 1960s following a brief, unhappy time at another college, such accomplishment seemed a remote possibility to her: she was a young woman who didn’t feel good about herself and didn’t feel good about school.

But all that changed. She says, simply, that Gainesville College “took her in” and saved her life.

“It was a growing-up period in my life when I needed to be given a chance to go to college, get my core classes behind me and make good grades,” Meagher says. “At Gainesville College the classes were small, the teachers cared and they took the time to let you know they cared.”

A native of Forsyth County, Meagher grew up in a doctor’s family, the daughter of Dr. Marcus Mashburn, an OB/GYN still in practice, and Alice Slate Mashburn. Her brother, John Mashburn, and her sisters, Catherine Amos and Ellene Place, also attended Gainesville College at various times in their respective college careers.

Meagher knew she wanted to teach physical education from the time she was a high school sophomore. But it was her years at Gainesville College that truly readied her — academically and emotionally — for the lengthy educational process ahead.

“My teachers and coaches always told me that I didn’t want to stop with my bachelor’s degree,” Meagher said, “and that planted a seed that made me realize I had to make good grades. Coach Ball helped me to stay with it, to get my classes and to be ahead of the game when I went on to the University of Georgia.”

Following her 1968 graduation from GC in the first group of two-year graduates to be sent off from the College’s present location, Meagher did indeed take her associate degree in education to the University of Georgia, where, in 1970, she earned her bachelor’s degree in education with an emphasis in health and physical education. She remained in Athens for two more years to earn her master’s degree in the same area. Years later, in 1986, she would earn a third degree, a specialist’s degree, in her field.

After leaving the University of Georgia, Meagher taught for seven years in DeKalb County at Towers High School, where, in addition to teaching physical education, she also coached girls’ basketball, track and gymnastics. During this period she married Charles Meagher, originally an art teacher who later moved into education administration.

Through the late 1970s and early 1980s, Meagher taught at the elementary and middle school levels, first in DeKalb County and then, when her husband was made assistant principal at South Gwinnett High School, in Gwinnett County. In 1987, the couple moved to Forsyth County, a move “back home” for Marguerite, and on a generous stretch of secluded, rolling land that was a gift from her father, they built the retreat that is still their home today.

In 1988, Meagher began the work that she is even more passionate about now than when she began. She is entering her fourth year teaching at the Open Campus School, a working experiment designed to accommodate students whose educational needs cannot be met completely in a mainstream high school situation.

“Our students are those who work every day during normal school hours to help support their families, or those who are high achievers who need extra courses to keep them stimulated,” Meagher says. “We also have students who are athletes who need remedial work in a course in order to be able to play sports.”

These are only a few of the kinds of students served in the Open Campus setting.

Housed at Norcross High School but separate from it, Open Campus offers as many as three class periods to students each school day from 6:00 - 9:00 p.m. Students sign a contract, agreeing to the strict educational and attendance requirements that are at the heart of the Open Campus approach.

"Responsibility for their behavior — for their education — is entirely on them," Meagher says. "We have had great success with this. We find that even students who have had truancy problems in their other schools will rise to the responsibility expected of them at Open Campus."

Students who attend the school full-time are eligible to have their tuition totally funded by the state. Those who attend other schools during the day pay $100 per class at Open Campus.

Open campus kinds of schools have existed in both Fulton and DeKalb counties for some years, Meagher says, and the Gwinnett County system, which takes students from other counties, is undergoing a major study to look at innovative ways of teaching, to determine why the program has been so successful and to look into the possibility of opening a day school that might also provide day care for children of school-age parents.

"Gwinnett County alone has 150 dropouts each year because of pregnancy," Meagher says. "A new day school would accommodate these young people, as well."

Gainesville-Hall County is also studying the Open Campus School considering the feasibility of having a school in this area founded on that same concept.

Meagher often compares her positive experience at Gainesville College with what is happening at Open Campus and desires the same kind of maturing experience for her students that marked her years at Gainesville College.

"Self-esteem and self-discipline are important aspects of physical education," Meagher says, "and the social aspect of it is important in what we do, too. I'm teaching my students how to live with people, how to get along and work with each other.

"I insist they do team work with people they don't know because all through life they will have to work with people they don't know. This gives them the chance to make new friends, too. All of it helps the way they see themselves and how other people look at them."

Marguerite Meagher's interest in athletics is as much a part of her personal life as her professional one. In her free time she plays ALTA and USTA tennis, jogs, and rides horseback through the fields around her home.

From the back deck of their home, both Meaghers watch birds and await glimpses of deer that gather in sevens and eights to graze nearby. For Marguerite, these moments, along with getaways to Pawleys Island, S.C., are ones that fill her up and prepare her for a very special eight-hour day that doesn't begin until 3:00 p.m.
Supporting Excellence in Education for Twenty-five Years

1991 MARITIME MARK
The Gainesville College Foundation was formed in 1967 to generate and administer private financial support of the College. Overseeing the funds raised by the Foundation is a continuing responsibility of a 36-member Board of Trustees which operates through an Executive Committee.

Funds provided through the Foundation continue to increase annually and are utilized primarily for student scholarships, faculty and staff development, and the many area outreach activities of the College. In recent years, increased emphasis has also been placed upon endowment activities.

The Executive Committee and the Trustees for 1991 are:

The Gainesville Junior College Foundation was created in the fall of 1967. Dr. Joel Paul, Academic Dean of the College, and Coach James A. (Bubba) Ball began a discussion of ways in which the College might obtain funds to help with the athletic program and the academic program. They subsequently met with James Mathis and asked him to help create a foundation.

Mathis selected some key community people from several areas and submitted their names to then-President Hugh Mills. Those individuals became the first trustees, and on November 4, 1967, the Foundation was created. James Dunlap, who had prepared a charter and bylaws, became Interim Chairman for the Foundation.

The organizational meeting of the Gainesville Junior College Foundation, Inc. was held on January 11, 1968, in the Student Center.

FIRST FUND DRIVE GOAL — $10,000

According to the minutes of the January, 1968 meeting, a motion was made, seconded, and unanimously adopted "to provide $10,000 this year to be used by the college for scholarships, music department needs, and any requirements in the athletic department needing to be supplemented."

The Annual Fund Drive consists of several campaign areas including a major donor thrust; "A Day for GC" in Hall County; mini-campaigns in Barrow, Gwinnett, Forsyth, Habersham, and Jackson Counties; a faculty/staff campaign; and alumni phonathons. A significant increase in alumni participation was evident in that, during twelve nights of phonathons, contributions and the number of alumni donors increased over 25%.

There is a continuing effort to solicit gifts for the endowment of the Foundation which as of December 31, 1991, was approaching $3 million.

THE INVESTMENT COMMITTEE REPORT

The efforts of the Gainesville College Foundation to raise $750,000 to qualify for a two-for-one match of $1,500,000 through the U.S. Office of Education, Title III Challenge Endowment Grant reached a successful conclusion on February 28, 1991. In anticipation of that success, an Investment Committee was appointed by the Board of Trustees and investment guidelines were developed.

The Committee also solicited proposals and subsequently selected Trust Services, a Division of the First National Bank of Gainesville, as the investment manager for both the Title III Endowment and the General College Endowment funds. A dollar-cost averaging procedure is being employed in transitioning the funds into the investment market according to the following adopted parameters, i.e., cash (5 - 30%), bonds (75 - 100%), stocks (0 - 25%). The results of the endowment activity are depicted on the accompanying charts and graphs, with year-end figures as of December 31, 1991.

The Investment Committee is pleased to present this favorable report at the Annual Meeting on behalf of the Board of Trustees.

The Alumni Association, established in 1984, functions as an arm of the Gainesville College Foundation. It operates under strong leadership from staff, officers, and a 43-member Alumni Council. From funds derived from the golf tournaments and other activities, the Association established the Alumni Scholarship Trust. Two students — Andy Bateman, Gainesville, and Cindy Queen, Flowery Branch — received scholarships in 1991-92 through the Alumni Scholarship Trust, which now has a corpus of over $83,500.

A Note of Appreciation

My years of service as a trustee of the Gainesville College Foundation have been most meaningful because of the opportunity they provided to work on such an excellent cause and to be involved with so many good people. Serving in this way also allowed me to partially repay the College for the role it played in my life years ago.

On behalf of the students, faculty, and staff of the College, I wish to thank all of you for your generous response to their needs. Also, I would like to express special appreciation to 1991 Fund Drive Chairman Joe Chipman, Honorary Fund Drive Chairman Ralph Cleveland, and the trustees and our volunteers for their many hours of service to the Foundation.

THE HERITAGE CLUB: ASSURING THE FUTURE

The Heritage Club was established to provide opportunities for supporters of the College to contribute to its long term future by making a commitment through a will, insurance policy, or other deferred gift. Our special thanks go to the following members who have notified the Foundation of their intent to support it through membership in The Heritage Club:

Edmond Coker
Neil Mize
Anne Jarrell Segars

Further development of a Planned Giving Program through The Heritage Club is targeted for special consideration in the coming year.

For further information on how you can become a member of The Heritage Club, call the Foundation Office at (404) 535-6248.

ANOTHER RECORD ENROLLMENT

Gainesville College enrolled the highest number of students ever in the 1991 fall quarter — 2,680, an increase of 191 students, or 7.7 percent, from the previous high of last fall. The quarter was the 23rd consecutive quarter of enrollment increases over the corresponding year-earlier quarters. In addition, the College, through its host role, has more than 200 students from North Georgia College on the Gainesville campus in the areas of business, nursing, and education.

Alumna Carol King Featured in AACJC Publication

Essays from three Gainesville College Alumni were featured in a new publication of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, Profiles in Success: Reflections on the Community College Experience. Essays by Donn M. Peevy, Lawrenceville, and Sammy Smith, Gainesville, have appeared in earlier issues of Anchors Away. Carol King's essay follows:

When Charlene Hunter and Hamilton Holmes became the first Black full-time students to attend the University of Georgia amid the sound and fury of angry mobs and armed escorts, I silently vowed, "I'm going to go to that school." Despite my 10-year-old optimistic idealism, I knew fulfilling that vow would not be easy for a shy little Black girl from a low-income family in a small Southern town of 1960. In less than 10 years, I began realization of that childhood fantasy by entering Gainesville College (formerly Gainesville Junior College).

Funny thing, though, the path to my goal actually was a detour. I'd chosen to sacrifice my original plans of attending a historically Black college in south Georgia for the love of my high school sweetheart. Shortly, after graduation in 1967, we decided to get married and start a family.

Attending college seemed like a faraway dream for a wife and mother who had neither the time nor funds to make it come true. But a family friend encouraged me to try GC. I could attend day classes and work evenings and weekends to cover tuition and other costs, or maybe even qualify for financial aid.

My first quarter, winter 1969, was tough: juggling Math 101 and child care, working in the college library and keeping house, and, most challenging, being student, mother, and wife. By the end of my second quarter, the marriage lost.

A chance meeting of the College Players drama club changed my life's direction. The drama instructor had developed a readers' theater production for a national competition. A Cuban refugee with a sensitivity for the problems of minorities, he focused the production on discrimination and racial pride. When I became one of the four cast members, winning first place trophies helped me realize the versatility of my abilities. My self-esteem skyrocketed especially after winning top honors for a two-person performance at another competition.

With this new-found confidence, I re-evaluated my career goals. I had always been interested in written and oral communications, but I'd never considered pursuing a communications career until my adviser, a graduate of the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, talked of attending classes with Charlene Hunter. I decided to follow the path to journalism. In fall 1970 I completed studies for an associate degree in journalism at GC. By summer '72, I earned a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Georgia.

Fulfilling that childhood fantasy was only the beginning. I launched my journalism career at my hometown daily newspaper, where I believe my minority perspective contributed to the balance of news coverage. I frequently talk with and encourage young people to pursue higher education and to consider starting at a two-year community college.

Carol King Keavney graduated from Gainesville College in 1970 with an associate degree in journalism. She subsequently received a B.A. degree in journalism from the University of Georgia. She served as a marketing communications specialist at Northside Hospital in Atlanta from 1988-91 and now lives in Newbury Park, California.
“Celebration of Quilts” Exhibit

A “Celebration of Quilts” exhibit will be held on March 2 - 27 (Monday - Friday from 1 - 3 p.m.) at Gainesville College’s Continuing Education/Performing Arts Center Gallery. Documentation of the quilts will take place on Friday and Saturday, March 27 and 28, from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

The Georgia Quilt Project is currently locating, registering, photographing and collecting information about the state’s quilts in order to preserve this portion of Georgia’s cultural heritage. Mrs. Elizabeth Harris, former First Lady of Georgia, is serving as Honorary Chairwoman.

Sandy Myers, Chairwoman of the Hall County Quilt Guild, which is co-sponsoring the exhibit and documentation session with Gainesville College, would like to talk to any person who might like to have a quilt or quilts in the exhibit. For information, call her at 536-0406 or Gainesville College at 535-6345.

SACS PROCESS NEARING END

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) self-study process at the College continued during the year. The self-study document was finalized in the fall quarter, and attention has been given to recommendations in it as the College prepares for the Visiting Committee which will arrive on campus in February. The College expects reaffirmation of accreditation by the SACS at its annual meeting in December, 1992.

LETTER OF THANKS

I would like to thank all the women of Gainesville College, randomly selected to participate in the study on non-traditional age students and graduates, who took the time to complete the questionnaire mailed to them. It was a very generous gesture at a hectic time of the year. I especially want to acknowledge those who made additional comments. These comments have been very helpful to me in working on this study. They will be forwarded to the administration so that Gainesville College can benefit from your insights.

The results of this study should be available at Gainesville College in late April. I truly appreciate your help in making this research possible.

Sincerely,
Kathleen H. Monturo, '87
Lilburn, GA

FORMER ACCOUNTING STUDENTS

Dr. Louise Holcomb, Chair of the Business Division, is collecting accounting texts from which she has taught through the years. She needs the text, 10th Edition of Accounting Principles by Niswonger and Fess. Please contact her if you have this book and would be willing to sell it to her. You may write her at the College or call at 535-6323.

Enrollment Hits New High For A Winter Quarter

Enrollment for the 1992 winter quarter at Gainesville College is up an impressive 11 percent — another record-high enrollment for a winter quarter. A total of 2,567 students are enrolled, up 254 students from the 2,315 students who attended the College in the 1991 winter quarter. This is the 25th consecutive quarter of enrollment increases compared with year-earlier figures.

“Enrollment has increased almost 60 percent from that in the 1985 winter quarter, shortly after I came to the College,” said Executive Vice President Steve Gurr. “We are accommodating this record number of students in the face of state budget constraints which have resulted in direct cuts to the College budget,” he added. “Thanks to the combined efforts of the admissions and registrar’s offices and faculty and staff of the College, the numbers are up and the registration process went smoothly.”

Winter quarter classes at the College began on January 7. The quarter continues through March 20.

WHAT ARE MATCHING GIFTS?

Since 1954, more than 1,050 companies have established matching gift programs for education, the arts, public broadcasting, nonprofit hospitals, and other community organizations. Under a corporate matching gift program, gifts made by a company's eligible employees to the nonprofit organizations that meet the company's guidelines are matched with company or corporate foundation funds. Colleges and universities were the first nonprofit organizations to benefit from matching gifts. They still receive the largest percentage of corporate matching gift monies, although benefits to other types of nonprofit organizations are growing rapidly. When considering a gift to GC, please determine whether your company is a "matching gifts" employer.

National Higher Education Week

For the third consecutive year, GC alumni, in recognition of National Higher Education Week, honored all 200 faculty and staff members of Gainesville College by personally presenting them with tokens of appreciation. The recipients were touched by the thoughtfulness of the Alumni Association and of those who took their time to deliver the gifts.

In honor of Higher Education Month in October, members of the Alumni Association came to campus and delivered mementos of appreciation to each faculty and staff member. Todd Burke, left, and Lee Chapman present Dr. Kathy Hunt with a velvet pouch of chocolate coins.
